Lawren H. Daltroy Preceptorship in Health Communication

The mission of the Rheumatology Research Foundation is to advance research and training to improve the health of people with rheumatic diseases.

The Lawren H. Daltroy Preceptorship in Health Communication was established with the aim of improving patient-clinician interactions and communications. Dr. Daltroy was an internationally recognized authority on health education and enhancing communication between physicians and patients. He performed groundbreaking studies on patient self-medication in hospitals, spousal support for cardiac patients and worksite health education. He was also a distinguished teacher, mentoring generations of graduate students and physicians in doctor-patient communication and clinical research methods.

This award provides resources to support the training, career development, and/or enhancement of research skills of researchers and clinicians. Eligible candidates for this mentored award include trainees, junior researchers or health professionals with no current or prior R01 or R01-equivalent funding.

Applicants must propose a project or projects to be carried out during the one-year award period. Projects must directly address patient-clinician interactions and communications. Projects could include (but are not limited to):

- Conducting a small-scale research or education project related to patient-clinician communication.
- Creation of teaching curriculum, training materials, measurements, etc. that can be used to enhance the field's understanding and mastery of effective patient-clinician communication.
- Participation in education and training opportunities aimed at improving the awardee's communication skills.
- Creating patient facing materials to enhance patient's understanding of disease status based on clinical or patient assessments
- Studies of the impact of health literacy/numeracy on patient outcomes or creation of low literacy/numeracy materials to improve communication with patients.
- Studies to enhance shared decision making in healthcare settings.
